

Ric's Free Streaming TV Guide, Ric Douglas, 5/10/2023 Well over a decade ago I was paying over $300 per month for cable & satellite. I had to subscribe to everything to get shows & news along with the variety of other content. It was basically 10 that were bundled with hundreds of other channels we never watched. We played around with YouTube, Google & bought the original Roku & we turned in all the gear & canceled both cable & satellite. Go to: <https://antennaweb.org> to get a signal predictor as to what TV channels you can receive at your address. I installed an Antop AT 402BV amplified UHF/VHF antenna with an enclosed slotted plane UHF antenna with VHF dipoles on the South facing eaves of our roof mounted only 20' off the ground a built in LTE filter on an eaves mount distributed to 6 TVs with a Channel Master CM 3414. A sufficient internet service is a requirement. Setting the resolution TV's & devices to 1080, 720 or 480 megapixels prevents you from going over your internet provider's data cap which causes your internet prices to soar up rapidly. You will need at least 5 Mbps to stream live on each device or TV. Paying anything above the price of your internet service, is not needed. Here's my experience based on fact I am paid by no one to watch or report on watching TV for free on the internet). As a true cord cutter for over a decade, there are too many sources of free TV & entertainment & day/week old shows. Many people use Amazon Prime for purchases & shipping. This comes with Amazon Prime Video. I use T-Mobile Play live channels. You can mirror/cast to your TV from your smartphone.
